

Generally, sales of "canned" computer software are taxable retail sales in Illinois. See 86 Ill. Adm. Code 130.1935. (This is a GIL).

Dear Xxxxx:

This letter is in response to your letter dated November 15, 1999. The nature of your letter and the information you have provided require that we respond with a General Information Letter, which is designed to provide general information, is not a statement of Department policy and is not binding on the Department. See 2 Ill. Adm. Code 1200.120(b) and (c), enclosed.

In your letter, you have stated and made inquiry as follows:

Our firm has recently purchased our computer hardware, a software license and a contract for the maintenance of the software and hardware from an out of state supplier:

NAME/ADDRESS

Please advise our firm if COMPANY is in fact paying use tax and is registered with the state of Illinois. We have withheld paying the use tax to COMPANY and will await your advice in this matter.

They charged use tax on the hardware and the monthly maintenance for the hardware and software. Use tax on hardware is certainly due Illinois. Please advise us if the maintenance of software and hardware is subject to use tax. No materials are ever used for software maintenance and hardware requires very little maintenance. The maintenance contract covers both hardware and software in order to avoid problems and limit responsibility to one supplier.

Your cooperation in this matter will be appreciated. Our concern is that if an out of state supplier was paid use tax and failed to remit to Illinois we would still be liable for the tax and then would have to sue the out of state supplier for recovery.

We are unable to give you specific information regarding another taxpayer. We are including general information regarding the taxation of computer hardware, software and maintenance agreements for your information. The Retailers' Occupation Tax Act imposes a tax upon persons engaged in the business of selling at retail tangible personal property. 35 ILCS 120/2 (1998 State Bar Edition). The Use Tax Act imposes a tax upon the privilege of using in this State tangible personal property purchased at retail from a retailer. 35 ILCS 105/3 (1998 State Bar Edition). Sales of computer hardware in Illinois are taxable as sales of tangible personal property.

Generally, sales of "canned" computer software are taxable retail sales in Illinois. See the enclosed copy of 86 Ill. Adm. Code 130.1935. However, if the computer software consists of custom computer programs, then the sales of such software may not be taxable retail sales. See Section 130.1935(c).

Custom computer programs or software are prepared to the special order of the customer. The selection of pre-written or canned programs assembled by vendors into software packages does not constitute custom software unless real and substantial changes are made to the programs or creation of program interfacing logic. See Section 130.1935(c)(3).

If transactions for the licensing of computer software meet all of the criteria provided in Section 130.1935(a)(1), neither the transfer of the software or the subsequent software updates will be subject to Retailers' Occupation Tax. A license of software is not a taxable retail sale if:

- A) It is evidenced by a written agreement signed by the licensor and the customer;
- B) It restricts the customer's duplication and use of the software;
- C) It prohibits the customer from licensing, sublicensing or transferring the software to a third party (except to a related party);
- D) The vendor will provide another copy at minimal or no charge if the customer loses or damages the software; and
- E) The customer must destroy or return all copies of the software to the vendor at the end of the license period.

As stated above, licenses of computer software are not taxable if they meet all of the criteria listed in Section 130.1935(a)(1). However, item (D) of that part requires the license to contain a provision requiring the vendor to provide another copy at minimal or no charge if the customer loses or damages the software. The Department has deemed software license agreements to have met this criteria if the agreements do not contain a provision about the loss or damage of the software, but the vendors' records reflect that they have a policy of providing copies of software at minimal or no cost if the customers lose or destroy the software.

Item (E) of this part also requires a license to require a customer to destroy or return all copies of the software to the vendor at the end of the license period. The Department has also deemed perpetual license agreements to qualify for this criteria even though no provision is included in the agreements that requires the return or the destruction of the software.

If your software license agreement meets all of these criteria, then neither the transfer of the software or the subsequent software updates will be subject to Retailers' Occupation Tax.

In general, maintenance agreements that cover computer software and hardware are treated the same as maintenance agreements for other types of tangible personal property. The taxability of maintenance agreements is dependent upon whether the charge for the agreement is included in the selling price of tangible personal property. If the charge for a maintenance agreement is included in the selling price of tangible personal property, that charge is part of the gross receipts of the retail transaction and is subject to Retailers' Occupation Tax liability. No tax is incurred on the maintenance services or parts when the repair or servicing is completed.

If maintenance agreements are sold separately from tangible personal property, the sale of the agreement is not a taxable transaction. However, when maintenance services or parts are provided under the maintenance agreement, the company providing the maintenance or repair will be acting as a service provider under the Service Occupation Tax Act. The Service Occupation Tax Act provides that when a service provider enters into an agreement to provide maintenance services for a particular piece of equipment for a stated period of time at a predetermined fee, the service provider incurs Use Tax based upon its cost price of tangible personal property transferred to the customer incident to the completion of the maintenance service. See 86 Ill. Adm. Code 140.301(b)(3), enclosed.

Charges for updates of canned software are fully taxable pursuant to Section 130.1935. If the updates qualify as custom software under Section 130.1935(c), they may not be taxable. But, if maintenance agreements provide for updates of canned software, and the charges for those updates are not separately stated and taxed, then the whole agreement would be taxable as sales of canned software.

Assuming that the services provided, such as installation, phone support, training, and seminars, do not require the transfer of tangible personal property to the recipients of those services, charges for such services are exempt if they are separately stated from the selling price of canned software. See Section 130.1935(b). If computer software training or other support services are provided in conjunction with a sale of custom computer software or a license of computer software, the charges for that training are not subject to tax.

I hope this information is helpful. The Department of Revenue maintains a Web site, which can be accessed at www.revenue.state.il.us. If you have further questions related to the Illinois sales tax laws, please contact the Department's Taxpayer Information Division at (217) 782-3336.

If you are not under audit and you wish to obtain a binding Private Letter Ruling regarding your factual situation, please submit all of the information set out in items 1 through 8 of the enclosed copy of Section 1200.110(b).

Very truly yours,
